During this period of time, I've been focused on things other than photography and spending time with my family. I hope to return to photography sooner than later. I've posted on here on a few occasions, but wanted to take a moment to offer a more formal farewell. I have over thirty years in the wedding industry, and have learned a great deal over the years. It's been an amazing ride, but now it's time to move on. I think it is important to remind myself and you all that I am a photographer, not a wedding planner. I make a living from weddings and I appreciate the work that is put into the planning and execution of these days. On the other hand, I can do all the shooting I want, but unless I have a professional plan, then it is all for naught. I have been blessed with a job that gives me the time to pursue my photography passion. I have had many jobs over the years that have required me to work non-stop, but being able to do what I love has always been the goal. This is my passion, and it is now the focus of my life. I truly do not feel that I can give you the level of service you deserve without the quality of work and planning that is necessary for a wedding to be a success. I truly want to thank everyone who has given me their business over the years

I want to assign that returned array to another function that will do something with it. I need to use 'this' in order to assign the returned array to the other function, but I'm having trouble. function doSomethingWithArray(input){ var newArray = []; $.each(input, function(index, value){ newArray.push(value); }); return newArray; } function useSomeFunction(){ return doSomethingWithArray(input); //need to pass the returned array to the function } A: This is called an "async closure." You're mixing your variable declaration into the function call, which makes the function call the same scope as the variable declaration. You need to move your variable declaration to the point where it's defined: function doSomethingWithArray(input){ var newArray = []; $.each(input, function(index, value){ newArray.push(value); }); return newArray; } function useSomeFunction(){ return doSomethingWithArray(input); } Here's the MDN doc on the topic: �min (Additional file 2{ref-type="media"}: Figure S3). After induction, the cells were rinsed with ice-cold PBS and lysed in TRIzol reagent (Invitrogen) for RNA isolation. The full-length coding sequence of TUBG1 was amplified from the plasmid pcDNA3.1-TUBG1 \[[@CR13]\] and the cDNA products were used as templates for point mutagenesis (Additional file 2{ref-type=" 2d92ce491b
